Space ops leader thanks radar team

Your article in the Hourglass for Tues., March 9, was nicely written — "Radar trackers score 100 percent" for FY 2003. Thank you very much for the effort that went into doing the full-page piece.

The Space Surveillance operations directors, in particular, and crews are the people that support the launches 24X7. KRS plaques were presented to recognize the Space Surveillance Operations team who regularly man the radar consoles for new foreign launch operations and made it a highly successful year. I need to thank them:

Operations directors — Don Mudd, John Sullivan, Jeff Smathers, Jeff Emde, Justin Huuki; Assistant Operations Director Mike Fleenor; operators — Robert Jarvis and William Damron.

The newest member of our Space Surveillance team, operator Greg Schlechte, received the first KRS Presidential Award from Ike Richardson.

I'd like to thank the MIT/LL space track analysts Bruce Kopp, Bob Kenney, Frank Pichler and their leader, Dr. Jay Donnelly, for continued support in mission planning and preparation. The space analysts work to help keep us prepared for all new launches.

Space Surveillance operations personnel help represent the U.S. Army's contribution of the ALTAIR and TRADEX radars on Roi-Namur Island to the United States Space Surveillance Network. All the KREMS radars — ALTAIR, TRADEX, MMW and ALCOR — have great versatility which provides support of deep space satellite tracking, near Earth satellite tracking, new launch operations and radar imaging. RTS contribution in space surveillance tasking are unparalleled worldwide and could expand further.

Anyhow, thanks for the excellent article which reflects very well on RTS and KRS, LLC.

Reporter takes a chop at the rubber tree

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Like the ant, we will move that rubber tree plant.

In light of KW Hillis' recent editorial on the schools on Ebeye, my family decided to do what we could. We headed over to the Ebeye public school to donate some school supplies.

When we arrived, unknown to us, it was the start of Education Week on Ebeye.

All the children of the Ebeye Public school were in the courtyard along with children from the various other schools on Ebeye.

There was singing, dancing and refreshments for everyone.

We went to the first and second grade classrooms where we were offered water and sandwiches as we handed out the pencils, crayons, color books, rulers and sharpeners.

Smiles formed across the faces of the children as they received their new school supplies. Some looked puzzled, others immediately started to color or sharpen their pencils.

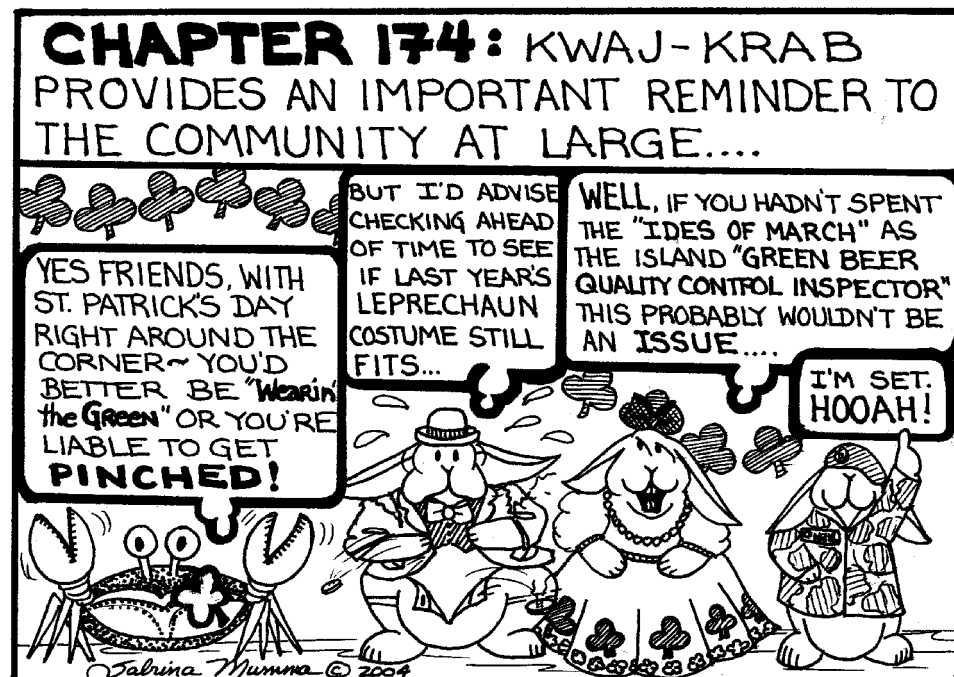

The classroom doorways jammed with older students curious about what was going on and anxious to receive pencils.

Although we couldn't supply the entire school with needed supplies we did make a dent.

Next month, we will return with more.

Police and Safety officials focus on bike safety

By Jan Waddell
Reporter

Police and KRS officials are taking a closer look at bicycle riding habits.

"We have seen an increase in unsafe habits," said Capt. Denise Morrow, deputy chief of police.

KRS Safety recorded 23 injuries since last March with everything from minor cuts to broken bones, according to Krystal Kubas, KRS safety specialist, with 11 injuries occurring since Jan. 1.

The KPD will stop someone who is riding in an unsafe manner or riding with a child in the baskets, Morrow explained. Offenders will first be given a verbal warning and let go, but repeat offenders will be cited.

The citations are sent to the offender's site manager for administrative action. Non-badged offender's citations will be sent to Maj. David Coffey, chief Host Nation Office, Morrow added.

KPD can cite someone for breaking the bicycling or driving regulations.

"Understand these rules and don't be shocked if you do get cited," Kubas added. "Pedal defensively. I don't want someone to get hurt."

deputy chief of police

For example, it is against regulations to ride with another person on the handlebars or in baskets.

"This isn't right, even though it is the norm," Kubas said.

Riding with a child in the basket is unsafe, Morrow added.

Kubas stressed carrying passengers on bicycles is prohibited, except when carrying a young child or infant secured in an infant pouch or a permanent seat. She said the permanent seat must prevent the passenger from falling

- Ride no more than two across.
- Pull over and stop when emergency vehicles approach.

- Don't impede traffic. Pull to the right before stopping. Don't stop and talk to others in the middle of the road.

- Never allow more than one person to ride on a bicycle at a time unless the bike is specifically designed for more than one. Any person carrying a child or infant must be of such an age and capability as to have total control of the bicycle.

- Never allow children to stand in the back of bicycle carts.

- Don't over load your bicycle.

- Keep loose clothing, padlock cables and bungee cords away from moving parts.

- Endurance cycling/training/speed riding is only allowed around the airport road in accordance with posted speed limits and with an approved helmet.

- Helmets are recommended for all riders.

- Lights are required at night South of 9th Street and along Perimeter Roads but are recommended everywhere during periods of darkness, a half an hour after sunset and a half an hour before sunrise.

- Register your bike with the Police Department. Bicycle registration is mandatory. Bikes must be registered within two weeks of making, buying or receiving a bicycle.

- Bicyclists may not carry open alcoholic beverages or operate a bicycle when intoxicated.

- Keep it locked.

- Keep your bike well-maintained and ride defensively at all times.

and from inserting their hands and or feet in the moving parts of the bicycle.

Kubas also strongly recommended the use of bicycle lights which are available at Macy's and Macy's West.

Regulations require bicycle lights south of 9th Street and along Perimeter Roads, a half an hour after sunset and a half an hour before sunrise.

Bicycle Safety Rules

- Obey all traffic signs especially speed limits.

- Use proper hand signals.

Command seeks relief on departed discounts

By Jim Bennett
Editor

Col. Jerry Brown, USAKA commander, addressed the topic of airfares and discontinued discounts, among other issues during a Town Hall meeting Friday.

Brown spoke specifically about Aloha Airlines' decision to eliminate child discounts, an issue that came up earlier in the week, and Aloha's changed baggage policy that limits passengers to two bags totaling a combined weight of 70 pounds. Brown said he talked to senior management officials at the airline last week.

"As always there are new issues with transition," Brown said. "They had new people making blanket decisions. They told me we should expect to see some relief."

USAKA did raise landing fees on airlines last fall, Brown said, adding the fees had remained too low for too long. But the increased landing fees did not impact the airlines' decision to change fees and restrictions.

The elimination of child discounts fell airline-wide and was not aimed specifically at Kwajalein, he added.

The baggage policy, however, affected not only Kwajalein, but other island routes including the Cook Islands, and followed the closing of the airstrip at Johnston Island, where Aloha aircraft previously refueled, said Maj. Jud McCrary, USAKA director of Logistics and Community Activities. As aircraft weight and fuel are inherently linked, the airline opted to cut baggage weight and keep as many seats on the plane as possible.

Meanwhile, Brown said he is still trying to contact Delta Airlines on their decision to disqualify Kwajalein ticket-buyers from their popular Visit USA passes. That issue, too, came up last week, and Brown asked the audience for their patience.

"Give us a few days to work this," he said. "I can't imagine they will stick with this."

The air travel issue topped an otherwise non-contentious and short meeting, with the colonel making opening remarks on some issues as the session began at 6:30 p.m., followed by only a few questions. By 7:05 p.m., residents were heading home.

The colonel opened the session by honoring Kwajalein Jr./Sr. High School Band Director Dick Shields for the group's work during the 60th anniversary of Operation Flintlock, the World War II battles for Kwajalein and Roi-Namur. The band performed at public events, and a select group played 1940s swing music for a commemorative dinner and dance.

"The band always rises to the

USAKA commander

occasion," Brown said, presenting Shields and a group of representative students with a framed Reagan Test Site photographic montage.

The commander then hit the issues starting with air travel and followed by information about a visit this week from Department of Defense Education officials.

"DoDEA is not a bad thing," he said. "There is no attempt to take over the schools."

Brown praised Kwajalein schools and said he invited the officials to visit the school in an attempt to address some issues and present the DoD with some of the challenges faced by local school officials. He added, he hoped some of those issues presented could result in additional funding from DoD.

Brown then talked about the persistent rumor of Boeing, as a contractor, leaving Kwajalein.

"Don't get too worked up yet," he said. "The situation is so fluid."

Brown said the departure of Boeing staff is based on missions, and due to mission rescheduling he doesn't expect any departures before Christmas, if then.

The colonel announced the Department of the Army had approved a privatization plan that will allow for new construction on Kwajalein in a fraction of the time common in the past. Under the plan, the command will partner with private contractors who will secure loans and construct the desired facilities, then lease those facilities to the command.

"We will not have to wait five to seven years to begin construction," he said. "We can start in five to seven months ... And we don't pay a dime until they turn over the keys."

First up under the plan is work on the Pacific Bachelor Quarters, followed by a unified dining facility that would replace the Yuk Club and Café Pacific. The command has also identified the Child Development Center, Aviation terminal and Kwaj Lodge buildings as priorities. Further down the road, over the next 10 years, the command is looking at building a new hospital, housing and apartments for bachelors.

Already, the command has three major contractors who have expressed interest, he said.

The Department of the Army has tagged the plan a pilot program and will watch the results for applications elsewhere in the Army.

"It's important we're successful with this," he said.

In other business:

- The colonel said the command would install two to three permanent mooring buoys near an unexploded ordnance site near a popular dive spot off the West Reef. The area is listed as a "no-anchor zone." The command will also look into installing similar buoys at other popular dive spots.

- An effort to lay fiber-optic cable from Guam to Kwajalein to Honolulu should begin this summer with an expected completion date of January or February 2006. Talk of the effort has already helped with new range customers looking at RTS, due to the expanded capabilities a fiber connection offers. Quality of life improvements will follow, as well.

- The Army will receive two new catamarans later this year, one in August, the other in October. The two are being built in Cairns, Australia, and both will be named for heroes from Operation Flintlock. The Pvt. Sorenson, USMC, is named for the Medal of Honor recipient from the battle for Roi-Namur, while the Pvt. Anderson, USA, is named for the posthumous Silver Star recipient from the battle on Kwajalein.

Awareness week focuses on inhalents, poisons

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

Whipped cream, spray paint, cleaning fluids and glue all have two things in common — they can be very useful in the home and they also can be very dangerous to children, from toddlers to teenagers.

"The same people who are prone to experiment, to seek new experiences, are also the group of folks who are, perhaps, most vulnerable to some of the adverse consequences of those experiences," said Dr. Eric Lindborg, Kwajalein Hospital Chief Medical officer.

Next week, March 21-27, is National Inhalants and Poisons Awareness Week, offering parents of teenagers and pre-teens a chance to take a closer look at a nationally growing problem and for parents of toddlers to take a closer look at their homes to make sure potentially dangerous substances are out of the reach of curious fingers.

Substance abuse

"This week is an opportunity, especially for parents and those who deal with young kids to be aware of the potential for problems," Lindborg said. "Tune into signs or indications that kids are doing things that aren't good for them and then seek intervention and help, if needed."

"Tune into signs or indications that kids are doing things that aren't good for them and then seek intervention and help, if needed."

— Dr. Eric Lindborg

The good news is that the abuse of substances including illicit drugs, alcohol and cigarettes among U.S. teenagers from 2001 to 2003 has declined, according to the National Institute on Drug Abuse. The bad news is that although inhalant abuse has decreased in general, last year eighth graders in the U.S. almost doubled their rate of inhalant abuse.

Substance abuse, including inhalant abuse, on Kwajalein has not been a major problem, Lindborg said, although residents should not become complacent.

Last fall, four teenagers were investigated for the illegal use of prescription drugs, which has had a sobering effect on other teens on island, according to high school senior Jon Cassel.

"They were used to people getting community service," he said. "When someone got a bar letter, they realized [USAKA] was getting serious."

Community involvement and school education has helped stem abuse problems on island.

Two years ago, high school counselor Bob Ammann saw a group of kids buying bottles of aerosol whipped cream.

"I contacted their parents and Dr. Lindborg," he said.

As a result, Surfway and Ten-Ten restricted sales of aerosol whipped cream and began a policy, still in effect, of restricting the sale of cough medicines and flavoring extracts to adults 18 and older.

Since inhalants are available in the stores and homes, it is important that parents know the symptoms of abuse since the effects of inhalants can have both short- and long-term effects, including death, Lindborg said.

"Short term ... There are neurochemicals that end up getting altered temporarily," he said. "And there are in the toxicology literature, reports of somebody just trying something for the first time and dying ... There can be an acute problem when somebody just stops breathing or seizes, or whatever — so, one could end up having a major adverse effect, short term."

A teen might abuse an inhalant without serious consequences and die when they abuse the inhalant again, he said.

Long-term chronic exposure can result in permanent damage to the nervous system.

"[It could] leave somebody a little bit less sharp cognitively, less able to remember things, less able to perform complex functions," Lindborg said.

Teenagers, because their bodies are still developing, "are more vulnerable to the possibility of long-term unfixable adverse effects," he added.

It is important for parents to know the signs of abuse, Lindborg said, and one source is the NIDA Web site: www.nida.nih.gov.

Another source for substance abuse information is the Kwajalein school system which has not been complacent about the problem.

Drug and alcohol education is addressed in each grade school curriculum at age-appropriate levels in addition to the intensive Drug Abuse Resistance Education program which targets sixth-graders, said Karen Ammann, Kwajalein school superintendent.

In an on-going effort to increase parent and teacher awareness of the potential problems, educational consultant and motivational speaker Michael Karpovich will teach both parents and teachers how to deal with substance abuse next week.

"[Teens] were used to people getting community service. When someone got a bar letter, they realized [USAKA] was getting serious."

— Jon Cassel
high school senior

Karpovich, who has been on the Today Show and Good Morning, America, is presenting "Raising the Best Generation," a program for parents of any age child, on March 23, 7 p.m. in the elementary school music building, Ammann said. Later in the week, he will work with teachers about the adult role in preventing substance abuse.

Another help for parents could be the Safe Home program which allows parents to know their children are supervised at other homes on island, said Marion Ruffing, certified Employee Assistance Professional.

The simple program, which Ruffing introduced to the island last fall, requires participating parents to sign an agreement promising they won't provide alcohol to minors and will always supervise their children's parties and gatherings, Ruffing said. Then parents can be sure that any home that is part of

Students revive drama club with 'Angry Jurors'

By KW Hillis
Assistant Editor

The room is hot, and so are tempers as 11 jurors, who want to convict a young suspect with the murder of his father, try to sway the vote at the only hold-out, juror number 8.

This is not a peek into a secluded jury room of a high-profile case in the news, but rather it is a rehearsal of the play "12 Angry Jurors," by the Kwajalein High School Players.

After the organization took a two-year hiatus, the curtain will go up again, said Eric Nelson, KHSP director and high school science teacher.

The players have been rehearsing since February, most recently in CRC room 6, in preparation for community performances March 20, 21 and 22.

The play "12 Angry Men," a 1957 movie starring Henry Fonda, Lee J. Cobb, E.G. Marshall and Jack Klugman, was renamed "12 Angry Jurors," to allow females in the cast, Nelson said. Since more females auditioned, the ratio of females to males is 7 to 5.

"Since none of the jurors are ever referred to by name, we could pick anyone we wanted to as long as we switched the pronouns in the speeches," he said.

During rehearsal of "12 Angry Jurors," Spencer Barrs, center, adds his vote to other jurors, including Sarah Alves, right, to convict a young man of murder while Luke Riley, left of Barrs, decides there is reasonable doubt. The Kwajalein High School Players will present matinee and evening performances of the play, March 20 - 22.

There are two casts, an A and a B cast, each cast with 15 roles so more students could participate.

"I knew there were a lot of seniors who had never been in a play," he said. "They can now go off to college having been in a high school play."

Nelson selected this particular play for many reasons.

"Some plays are so dated. This is a pretty topical play. It has a good social message," he said. "It is also relatively simple in terms of sets and lights."

The cast were given some leeway to develop their characters, although all the jurors are supposed to be stereotypes, including a bully, an intellectual and a bigot.

In addition to changing the play to include female cast members, Nelson broke a stereotype in his mind.

"I had in mind the bully would be a male, but Cordi Woods, in Cast B, really wanted to be the bully ... she did a good job in the tryouts and got the part," he said.

Nelson hopes to produce more plays next year including "Arsenic and Old Lace."

Cast A which is mainly seniors will perform the Saturday and Sunday evening productions, at 7:30 p.m. Cast B will perform the matinees at 1:30 p.m., Sunday and Monday, he said. The performances are at CRC room 6 and tickets are on sale in the junior/senior high school library or from Anne Greene, 53793.

Kwajalein High School Players director Eric Nelson explains to Rebekah Ladd how her character should cross in front of the other actors on stage. Nelson, was an assistant director for community plays in Washington, Iowa and acted in high school.

the Safe Home program is safe for their children.

"I received a lot of positive comments about the program, but only five actually signed the agreement," she said.

Confidentiality

If a parent suspects that their child is abusing inhalants or other substances, they can seek help without worrying about confidentiality, Lindborg said.

"If they come to Marion or the hospital, confidentially will be maintained," he said. "They will get [help] anonymously. We are not obliged to report any of this ... And it is far better to seek help early than to let things run out of control. Once it reaches the legal or administrative level, there is not much we can do here."

Raising the Best Generation

Tuesday, March 23, 7 p.m. at the elementary school music building. This presentation focuses on how parents can build self-esteem in their children and help them make sound health decisions and choices.

Questions, call 53761.

call 55362.

Accidental poisonings

One moment the door to a cabinet containing cleaning supplies is closed and those multicolored vitamins or prescriptions are sitting on the counter, the next moment a curious toddler is being rushed to the hospital. An accidental poisoning, the other health focus, can occur in an instant.

"Kids see Mom and Dad taking pills and they want to be grown up and try it out, or they think it is candy," Lindborg said. "On the other side of poisons is the household chemicals — the Drano under the sink can cause terrible, terrible problems."

If a parent here thinks a child has ingested something dangerous, they should call the ER, 52224 or 52223, which is always staffed, said Chris Maurer, Pharmacy technician. Parents should try to figure out what the child ingested to help the medical staff determine what actions to take.

If traveling in the states, residents should know the National Poison Hot Line number 800-222-1222.

"Residents with children may want to do a quick survey to make sure that things that could be dangerous are not within ready reach of their kids," Lindborg said.

Outdoor antennas coming soon to Macy's West ...

their regularly scheduled first-run film at 9:30 p.m.

- Television service should improve as officials have made plans to offer selected outdoor antennas at Macy's West. A team will test two models soon, and the best will be offered for sale, along with an installation kit, or the option to pay for installation. "In the end, we'll all be pleased with the reception," Brown said. Maj. Joe Southerland, USAKA director of Information Management, said he hoped the antennas would tie into the existing cable within New Housing, but added that the cable is 18 years old, and through deterioration, may no longer work. Cabling the entire island would prove cost-prohibitive, even though conduit exists for the cable.

- On a question about KRS insurance, the colonel asked KRS President Ike Richardson to update the audience on the study for potential new carriers. Richardson said the study should conclude by the end of the month. Brown continued by praising KRS' efforts in improving dining options and retail offerings.

- A nurse from the hospital pointed to drugs on Ebeye and asked what schools were doing to protect local children.

Brown said, "Drugs come here in a variety of imaginative ways," adding some wash up on the shore.

Brown called on School Superintendent Karen Ammann who announced the schools were bringing in a consultant next week, who would address parents in a session 7 p.m., March 23 at the elementary school (see related story, page 5). The consultant would also work with teachers and staff in a two-day workshop March 25-26. Ammann added, the regular curriculum addresses anti-drug messages, too.
